THE PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE OF THE DEATH PENALTY

AND A SPECIAL PRESENTATION OF "THE EXONERATED"

The Tennessee Law Review at the University of Tennessee College of Law is hosting a Colloquium, The Past, Present, and Future of the Death Penalty, on Friday and Saturday, February 6-7, 2009.

TOPICS OF DISCUSSION

Topics will include the future of the death penalty in light of recent Supreme Court decisions; methods of execution; race and death-penalty populations; mental illness, disability, and the death penalty; innocence and post-conviction appeals; and death penalty administration in Tennessee.

SYMPOSIUM ISSUE

The Tennessee Law Review will publish articles from many of the Colloquium speakers in a special Spring 2009 Symposium Issue on the Death Penalty.

Copies may be preordered by mailing a check payable to the Tennessee Law Review for $13 ($10 cost, $3 postage) to Micki Fox, Business Manager, Tennessee Law Review, 1505 W. Cumberland Ave., Knoxville, TN, 37996.

"THE EXONERATED"

On Friday night, February 6, the University of Tennessee's Department of Theatre will present "The Exonerated." This powerful and moving play, written by Erik Jensen and Jessica Blank, tells the stories of six people who were wrongfully convicted of murder, then exonerated and freed after life-altering experiences in prison. The National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers awarded Jensen and Blank the Champion of Justice Award for the play.
